

Guide to migrate to new computer

License

Licenses are pretty flexible regarding moving the program to a new computer, to use the program in a new computer just enter the license key that was provided when the license of the program was purchased.

Types of database configuration

By default AWB Editor will use an embedded database to store all the information. If you have not configured anything related to the database, then this is your type of configuration.

If you have configured the program to use the internet database or a shared database then to keep on using the same database on the new computer just reenter the configuration that was provided to you.

Copy the embedded/local desktop database

To copy your current database to the new computer follow these steps:

1. On the old computer go to File->Configuration and at the bottom you will see a button that says "Back up" click it and enter a location for the backup file, for example a flash drive
2. On the new computer go to File->Configuration and at the bottom click on the button that says "Restore" and browse to the backup file

Now you should get the information in the new computer.
